As the site's name says, Scrs+recorders for AutoCAD schematics are the ones that fix errors in a CAD program. For example: having a line that's been connected on many parts of a structure, is connected on a roof of it, the extended line would be connected on a thick cross member on that roof. The system know this as a misplaced connector symbol, and would get it fixed. In brief: The system would open two dialogs: on the left side you could choose the line's top-left corner, on the right side you could choose the connection part of it on the building.Q: How to sort arraylist by comparing the strings contained in the element in Java? I have to sort this arraylist by comparing the strings contained in the elements in such a way that the closest start string should be placed at the top and the words followed by different numbers or characters should appear in the middle. Here is my code: public static void main(String[] args) { ArrayList arr = new ArrayList(); arr.add("Jackson"); arr.add("Jetta"); arr.add("Golf"); arr.add("Porsche"); arr.add("Audi"); arr.add("Ferrari"); Collections.sort(arr); for (String x:arr) System.out.println(x); } A: Sorting custom objects is hard. You should create a class that contains both the name and value: class NameAndValue {
